ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A storage statistics collection system that continuously monitors and collects data associated with read and write commands issued from a host processor. Parameters collected may include, for example, the total read sectors, the total write sectors, the total number of read commands, the total number of write commands, and system latencies. Displays and reports, such as histograms based on the collected data, provide a visualization of system performance characteristics.